Period for Reply

A SHORTENED STATUTORY PERIOD FOR REPLY IS SET TO EXPIRE ____ MONTH(S) OR THIRTY (30) DAYS, WHICHEVER IS LONGER, FROM THE MAILING DATE OF THIS COMMUNICATION.

- Extensions of time may be available under the provisions of 37 CFR 1.136(a). In no event, however, may a reply be timely filed after SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- If NO period for reply is specified above, the maximum statutory period will apply and will expire SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- Failure to reply within the set or extended period for reply will, by statute, cause the application to become ABANDONED (35 U.S.C. § 133). Any reply received by the Office later than three months after the mailing date of this communication, even if timely filed, may reduce any earned patent term adjustment. See 37 CFR 1.704(b).

Status

Art Unit: 3691

DETAILED ACTION

1. The following is a non-final, first Office action on the merits. Claims 1-45 are pending.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 1-45 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Bennett (U.S. 5,761,441).

As per claim 1, Bennett. teaches a method of providing and obtaining investment return, comprising:

(a) an Investor making an investment in a company (See column 1, lines 54-67, which discusses how an investor may invest in companies);

(b) said investment benefiting the company by allowing it to conduct operations (See column 1, lines 7-50, which discusses investing in small start-up companies, whereby it is inherent that the capital invested is used to allow the start-up company to conduct business);

(c) said operations benefiting vendors to the company when the company purchases services (See column 1, lines 7-50, which discusses the purchase of insurance coverage);

(d) basing the investment return from said investment in part on the amount of concessions agreed to by vendors (See column 1, lines 7-50, which discusses receiving dividend income); and

(e) requiring that at least part of said investment return be paid by persons or entities acting for the benefit of any person set forth herein (See column 2, lines 1-48, which discusses how a trustee pays out dividend income).

As per claim 2, Bennett teaches using an Agent to transfer payments (See column 2, lines 1-48, which discusses the trustee transferring payments).

As per claim 4, Bennett teaches requiring at least part of the terms about investment returns not be changed without the approval of a person or entity, who is not a person or entity acting for the benefit of any person set forth therein (See column 13, lines 14-50, which discusses how either party would have to obtain the permission of the other party to transfer its interest).

As per claim 5, Bennett teaches (a) requiring that the person or entity whose approval is required be someone who will receive a financial benefit from the continuation of the same terms about investment returns; and (b) said person being a party to the transaction (See column 9, lines 24, through column 10, line 23, which outlines how an investor, an original party to the transaction, may receive the benefit of the original investment terms).

As per claim 6, Bennett teaches requiring that any attempt by an investor to assign rights of the investor or an affiliate, will cause the rights of the investor or an affiliate to be transferred to a person or entity acting for the benefit of any person set forth herein (See column 2, lines 49-64, which discusses how an investor or lender may transfer rights and obligations under the contract).

As per claim 7, Bennett teaches requiring that the person or entity which the rights of the Investor or an affiliate are transferred be a person or entity who will receive financial benefit from the continuation of same terms about investment returns, said person being a third party to the transaction (See column 2, lines 49-64, and column 13, lines 14-50, which discusses how either party would have to obtain the permission of the other party to transfer its interest; and, furthermore, how an investor or lender may transfer rights and obligations under the contract to a third party).

As per claim 9, Bennett teaches requiring vendors to enter into a written agreement to discount the price of services (See abstract, which discusses a contract incorporating discounts).

As per claim 10, Bennett teaches requiring that the economic benefits of said discounts be transferred to an investor (See column 3, line 65, through column 4, line 5, which discusses discounting the return on investment for an investor based on resulting projected value flows).

As per claim 11, Bennett teaches requiring that the investment return to the investor (See column 3, lines 1-24, which discusses returning dividends and remaining shares to the investor).

As per claim 12, Bennett teaches using a vender sharing arrangement (See column 2, line 64, through column 3, line 24, which discusses T-O-P contracts).

Claims 13, 15-18, 20-22 recite equivalent limitations to claims 2, 4-7, & 9-11, respectively and are therefore rejected using the same art and rationale.

As per claim 23, Bennett teaches providing services to an issuer which assists persons or entities acting for the benefit of a person set forth herein, to provide an investment return (See claim 1, which discusses a data processing system used to provide an investment return).

Claims 25-27 recite equivalent limitations to claims 9-11, respectively and are therefore rejected using the same art and rationale.

Claims 28 & 30-32 recite equivalent limitations to claims 23 & 9-11, respectively and are therefore rejected using the same art and rationale.

As per claim 33, Bennett teaches providing and selling other types of services to an issuer, comprising as part of Adviser Services, assisting one client to enter into at least one part of a transaction (See claim 1, which discusses a data processing system that may be used in conjunction with consulting services to provide an optimal investment return).

Claims 34-45 recite equivalent limitations to claim 33 and are therefore rejected using the same art and rationale.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 3, 8, 14, 19, 24, & 29 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bennett (U.S. 5,761,441).

As per claim 3, Bennett does not expressly disclose requiring at least part of the investment return to be reinvested in the company in which the investment was originally made.

The Examiner takes Official Notice that it is old and well known in the art to allow parties to a contract to freely negotiate the contract terms. Therefore, it would be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to require that a return on investment be reinvested in the original company in order to achieve the predictable result of negotiating to have an investment return reinvested in the company (See column 2, lines 1-48, which discusses the trustee transferring payments; it is inherent that that trustee must act according to the terms of the trust and at the direction of the beneficiaries, in this case, the investor. Therefore, it is feasible that a beneficiary, or investor, may direct a trustee to reinvest his payments back into the company in which the investment was originally made).

Claim 14 recites equivalent limitations to claim 3 and is therefore rejected using the same art and rationale set forth above.

As per claim 8, Bennett does not expressly disclose requiring the issuer to purchase a service from a person or entity designated in investment documents.

The Examiner takes Official Notice that it is old and well known in the art to allow parties to a contract to freely negotiate the contract terms. Therefore, it would be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include in an investment contract a requirement that a company must purchase a service from a person or entity in order to achieve the predictable result of requiring a company to purchase products or services from a designated entity as a form of consideration in return for an investor making an investment in the company.

Claims 19, 24, & 29 recite equivalent limitations to claim 8 and are therefore rejected using the same art and rationale set forth above.
